

Female Vocalist

Annie Ellicott

Tulsa's favorite female vocalist has no limitations. Although she's best known for her vocal jazz stylings and an occasional foray into bluesy numbers, this veteran of the annual "Divas" concert at the PAC can burn down a pop number in her own way and has proven her worth standing next to three generations of Tulsa's First Ladies of music. If you haven't heard her yet, all you need to do is open your ears.

Close Call:

Mary Cogan
Rebecca Ungerman

Live Theater Group

Eye Candy Burlesque

Ooh, la, la. These ladies have been dancing in Tulsa for two years now, putting the tease back in striptease and garnering a fan base big enough to fill Drillers Stadium (meanwhile, the Drillers themselves are having trouble filling Drillers Stadium). It's funny, though, that the same readers who voted conservative KRMG Best News Radio Station also voted Tulsa's only burlesque troupe Best Live Theater Group. We know, we know—you're complicated.

Male Vocalist

David Cook

Surprise, surprise. Tulsa's favorite adopted son not only won American Idol, he overthrew perennial favorite Ben Kilgore to take this honor, making him an ABoT winner for two years in a row (last year he won Best Local Indie Produced Album for his solo release Analog Heart). Between this and American Idol (and we all know which is the more distinguished honor—Idol is for the birds), he's on top of the world.

Close Call:

Malan Darras
Ben Kilgore

Annie Ellicott

PHOTO BY JEREMY CHARLES

Need Directions?

Then PICK UP The 2008 Spring Thing!

Fall Guide to Tulsa
Coming September 18th
Call 592-5550 for details